PRIMARY ELECTIONS.

The Wilmington Star of the 4th inst. gives conspicuous prominence to an account of the Orange county meeting apparently for the purpose of showing its unswerving devotion to Mr. Turner by rebuking us for opposing his proposition. Now, we penned the article referred to without any idea of discussing the abstract proposition of primary elections, but simply to set forth the fact that the people of Orange are not responsible for the idea; that the meeting was no meeting of theirs, but itself was used without authority by Mr. Turner to obtain sanction for another of his schemes to hoodwink the public and gain apparent authenticity for some future candidacy. And we were the more betrayed, because of those efforts made by Mr. Turner to give wide diffusion to his movements by simultaneous publication in papers in different parts of the State, thereby committing the people of Orange to a proposition entirely new to them.

They have the right to select their candidates in any way they deem fit; by primary election, as well as by convention. But in advance of any demand for any change of their old methods, long before the occasion arises for which they might be called upon to choose or vary their modes, we, nor they, are willing that they shall be prematurely committed to any plan of action.

The Star evidently thinks that the antecedents of Mr. Turner give him an authority which outweighs the will of his constituents. We, in Orange, have been compelled to shake somewhat of our submissive admiration, and to view Mr. Turner in the light of his latter day performances. We have not forgotten—and we remember it as vividly as does the Star—that former brilliant career which did Mr. Turner so much honor, and the people so much service. But we do not forget as the Star seems to do, that between that former chapter of his history and the present years there is a gaping chasm in which he has voluntarily chosen to engulf his past reputation. A career to be admirable must be consistent in all its parts. This consistency was destroyed, when in the insane pursuit of a position he had once voluntarily declined to accept but of which self denial he afterwards bitterly repented, he not only courted, but used the alliance of the party enemies he had once so vigorously denounced, and owed almost the only support he received in the last period to that opposition, and the self denying withdrawal of the leaders of the Republicans from the contest.

Can the Democrats of Orange consent now that Mr. Turner shall instead of them be the way to select candidates? Can they, as a party, ever consent that he who would have destroyed their unity that he might succeed, agree that he, again for his own advancement, shall commit them without their knowledge or consent to new and untried experiments of selection?

Party unity is what the Democrats of Orange are determined on, that unity they will not imperil by [illegible] the tender mercies of a man on several prominent occasions ready to sacrifice it for his own good.

We must therefore be permitted to make a distinction between the abstract question of primary elections, and the purpose of Mr. Turner to employ them to reinstate his fallen fortunes by the unauthorized use of the name and position of the people of Orange.

MY MOTHER-IN-LAW.

The justice at one of our city courts was much astonished to see amongst the prisoners a well known and influential citizen.

'Officer,' said he, to the attending blue coat, 'what is the charge against Mr. Brown (the citizen's name)?'

'Drunk and disorderly,' grimly replied the officer.

'Mr. Brown, is this so?' asked the justice turning to the prisoner.

'Right as a trivit,' responded that gentleman.

The justice looked shocked.

'I thought that there must be some mistake,' murmured he. 'What possessed you to get drunk?' Mr. Brown?'

Mr. Brown looked up at the bench, and smilingly replied.

'My mother-in-law has been living with me eighteen years. Just think of that, judge, eighteen years, of mother-in-law! Well, last week she died; and I—I immediately went out and got full, for, judge, I'm one of those fellows who never can stand prosperity.'

THE CHESAPEAKE DUCK DOGS.

They are said to be the breed known as Chesapeake duck-dogs, and they certainly showed that retrieving ducks was their vocation. They went out straight through some thirty birds, in and around the decoys, leaving the two baldpates, which only slightly ruffled, were swimming gayly away. Each dog selected his bird, and went for it steadily. As the dog drew near them, sent the duck. The dog stopped, and then, raised up in the water turning slowly round in a circle looking for the duck to re-appear. The moment it came up he went for it again. This time he got nearer. The same thing was repeated, the dog each time waited patiently for the duck's reappearance, and each time getting nearer to it. Finally, with a sudden dash and a partial dive, each dog seized her duck, and turning, swam to shore with it. They would not trouble themselves with the ducks that Joe could secure, but selected those that required their particular attention, swimming after each not less than a quarter of a mile. When a shot is fired and a duck falls, a dog trained as these were will, unless forbidden, leave the blind immediately and secure the bird. If no duck falls he lies down again, invariably using his own judgment as to the result of the shot. He will never stir without express orders if he thinks the shot has been ineffectual. The breed is peculiar to these waters. It is a short-haired water-spaniel, drawn from imported stock, and peculiarly adapted to the cold water, and has been cultivated for years and is greatly prized by the sportsmen of Maryland.

Then Joe commenced toiling the ducks. He threw a chip into the water, and let his dog go. The spaniel skipped eagerly in, with unbounded manifestations of delight. I thought it for a moment a great piece of carelessness on Joe's part. But in went another chip just at the shallow edge, and the spaniel entered into the fun with the greatest zest imaginable. Joe kept on throwing his chips, first to the right and then to the left, and the more he threw the more gayly the dog played. For twenty minutes I watched this mysterious and seemingly purposeless performance, but presently, looking toward the ducks I noticed that a few coots had left the main body and had headed toward the dog. Even at a distance, I could see that they were attracted by his actions. They were soon followed by other coots, and, after a minute or two, a few large ducks came out from the bed, and joined them. Others followed these, and then there were successive defections of rapidly increasing numbers. Several ducks stood up in the water by the aid of their wings, sustained themselves a moment, and, sitting down, swam rapidly around in involved circles, betraying the greatest excitement. And still the dog played, and played, and gamboled in graceful fashion after Joe's chips. By this time the ducks were not over two hundred yards away, and, taking heart of their numbers, were approaching rapidly, showing in all their actions the liveliest curiosity. It was an astonishing and most interesting spectacle to see them marshaling about, to see long lines stand up out of the water, to note their fatuous excitement and the fidelity with which the dog kept to his deceitful antics never breaking the spell by a fatal bark or a disturbing movement. The more wildly he played, the more erratic grew the actions of the ducks. They deployed from right to left, retreated and advanced, whirled in companies and crossed and recrossed on another.

Stragglers hurried up from the rear, and bunches from the main bed came fluttering and pushing through to the front to see what it was all about. By this time the nearest skirmishers were not a hundred yards off, and as Joe threw the chips to the right or left and the dog wheeled after them, as would the ducks immediately wheel from side to side. On they came until some were about thirty yards away. These held back, while the ungovernable curiosity of those behind made them push forward until the dog had a closely packed audience of over a thousand ducks gathered in front of him.

'The!' said B; and the spectacle ended in havoc and slaughter.—Scribner for Nov.

'Yes, doctor,' remarked Mr. Partington, 'and a few days previous feeling somewhat predisposed, and having a grasping pain in the abandon, I took some patient medicine, and I feel convinced that it seriously repaired my constituent. I suppose I'm of an execrable temperature, for I'm always a-worrying ever since Betsy Smith had congregation of the lungs, or some tonsorial affection; but to tell the truth, I've always dreaded an internal rumor.'

'Rise early, if you wish to become rich and conquer an enemy.' 'What is the most beautiful thing?' 'The universe.' 'The strongest?' 'Necessity.' 'The most difficult?' 'To know ourselves.' 'The easiest?' 'To give advice.' 'The rarest?' 'A true friend.'

ABOUT TELEGRAPHING.

The New York correspondent of the Troy Times writes: One of the most interesting places in this city is the telegraph building, corner of Broadway and Day Street. Formerly this space was occupied by the Printing House, a very popular one. From Franklin's connection with electricity, it seems proper that the telegraph building should be its successor. As a specimen of grand commercial architecture, this structure has no superior, and the fact that its cost was $2,000,000 shows how much can be laid out on space not exceeding 50 by 150 feet. The telegraphic operations carried on in this establishment are of an extent that would perplex an ordinary observer. It may, however, be suggested by the fact that the services of 325 capable employés are required beside operators. The room occupied by the latter is of vast size, and is on the sixth floor. Here 265 skillful persons watch the clicking of the machines. A large portion of this force is composed of young women. Two boy operators receive $115 per month, and work entirely by ear. There is a great surplus of talent in this establishment, and many ineffectual applications for employment are made daily.

The contrivances to check the cheap material and the immense results in telegraphy is very striking. The power is obtained simply from sulphate of copper (blue vitriol), water and zinc. In the battery room there are 14,000 cups in use, each containing the necessary elements. The heaviest battery contains 350 cups (or cells), and is used solely for Chicago dispatches. They consume 20 barrels of blue vitriol every month, and 3,000 pounds of zinc. On one of the upper floors a restaurant is in operation where the employés have a first class dinner at a reasonable price. They purchase tickets in advance, and these tickets are currency for dishes, which are supplied on the European plan. This system is becoming very general in all large establishments. During the hot weather a ton of ice is consumed in this establishment daily, nearly fifty water coolers being in use.

The cable battery contains a dozen cells. I need hardly say that the method used in cable practice differs from ordinary telegraphy. The term applied to this method is 'induction.' I have not space for its explanation, but one of its features is the reflection of the needle. The cheapest message on the cable is seventy-five cents, and is limited to one word. Some of our readers may think that one word can be of little use, but if properly handled it may convey as much information as an ordinary sentence. This can be done by the method called 'packing.' Let us suppose that a New York banking house arranges with its London correspondent a vocabulary of words, each of which has a specific meaning. The London house may telegraph, for instance, the word 'thunder,' and the New Yorkers, by reference to their book, will find the meaning of 'thunder' to be 'the Bank of England has advanced its rate of interest to three per cent.' All this, which at long rate would cost $75, is obtained for a mere trifle, and the system certainly shows great ingenuity. The cable operators, as there are called, are numerous and are in charge of a very expert operator. The difference in time between New York and London is a curious feature in ocean telegraphy. The London banker is in the full swell of traffic when the New York agent is first thinking of 'getting up.' At noon the London markets are cabled to this city, where they arrive at seven o'clock in the morning of the same day. The London agent of the New York press telegraphs the most important news issued in the London Times at six o'clock in the morning. It reaches here at one o'clock the same morning, just in time to be inserted in New York journals, whose readers have the same matter that the Londoner digests with breakfast. This is doing a little better than even 'taking time by the forelock.' It is getting ahead of him in a prodigious manner.

ANECDOTE OF DAGUERRE.

M. Dumas related the following anecdote of Daguerre: 'In 1825 he was lecturing in the Theatre of Sorbonne, on chemistry. At the close of the lecture a lady came up to him and said, "Monsieur Dumas, as a man of science I have a question of no small amount to me to ask you. I am the wife of Daguerre the painter. For some time he has let the idea seize upon him that he can fix the image of the camera. Do you think it possible? He is always at the thought, he can't sleep at night for it. I am afraid he is out of his mind. Do you, as a man of science, think it ever can be done, or is he mad?" "In the present state of knowledge," said Dumas, "it cannot be done, but I cannot say it will always remain impossible, nor set the man down as mad who seeks to do it." This was Twelve Years before Daguerre worked his idea out, and fixed the images; but many a man of haunted by a possibility has been tormented into a madhouse.—Journal Pour Tous.

'Man's love to God is like the changing sand; His is like the solid rock.' 'Man's love is like the passing meteor with its fitful gleam; His is like the fixed stars, shining far above, clear and serene, from age to age, in their own changeless firmament.'

WHAT GOETH ON AT PRESENT.

And in these days the coquettish shop-girl goeth home in the eve from her labors and the wicket along the street, and the eleventh and depresseth the bit of her left side, and she maketh the acquaintance of the promiscuous young man. And on Saturday night shall they go into the Bowery and sit one by the side of the other, and crack the sociable peanut, and the flame of love shall be stirred within their hearts.

And at this season, also, the candidate for an office hireth him a wagon, and a great bell therein; and he seeketh an experienced ringer of bells, and he saith unto him: "Ring me now a merry peal through the streets of the city, that the people may know that I am the man of their choice, and the foe of corruption and of all iniquity." But the experienced ringer of bells, getteth drunk of the candidate, and he goeth through the streets and he tolleth a dirge, and the heart of the candidate is heavy thereat.

Also, about this time doth the young man of lofty aims start the newspaper that shall be for a light unto the world. And in the space of three months shall come to pass what was spoken by the prophet, saying: "He struck me for a quarter, and I struck him back for a dampbule." And thereafter that young man leaveth it to other young men to start newspapers for a light unto the world.

Also hereabouts in the year the careful youth putteth on a chest-protector and covereth his lungs from the cold. And the heedless young man standeth by and revileth that careful youth, and he presently is gathered unto his fathers.

This is, moreover, the time when the young woman, who, walketh uprightly, taketh counsel with herself, and getteth her wools of various colors, and knitteth a comforter for the attractive and eligible young minister, against the time when he shall be cold in the days of winter. And this she doeth that he may be grateful therefor, and may say unto her: 'Maiden, wilt thou be my wife?' But the attractive and eligible young minister smoketh her little game, yea, in that locality hath he been ere this, and he smiled on the zealous sister; but he contenteth himself with smiling.—Puck.

AN INTELLIGENT DOG.

We hear much of the intelligence of dogs, and the many wonderful and well vouched instances that are recorded can scarcely cause surprise at any new proof of sagacity. The following from Belgium has been commented upon severely, but there seems no reason for doubting that dogs are capable of all the reasoning faculties here applied:

A certain Monsieur N——, going on foot from Leuze to Kessines, in Belgium, took with him his dog, which he was anxious to get rid of; but he was unwilling either to drown him or to shoot him, he resolved to lose him on the way. The dog, who, instead of kind words and caresses, received nothing but threats, seemed to understand his master's project; he kept quite close to his heels, and would not leave him for a moment. N——, obliged to sleep out for that night in order to finish his business, went to the inn, and said to his four-footed companion, instead of 'good night,' 'To-morrow, you rascal, I shall take the train, and you will have to walk about here.' He then went up to his room and went to bed.

The next morning, great was N——'s surprise to perceive when he got up that one of his socks and his waistcoat were missing. The landlord, when questioned, maintained that no one could have taken these articles as no other stranger had been lodged in the inn. They were all searching and wondering, when they found in a corner of the house the dog who had been so threatened the evening before, lying upon the stocking and waistcoat of his master. The poor animal seemed to have wished in this way to prevent his master from starting without him. N——, admiring the sagacity of his dog, no longer tried to get rid of him.

Watch for opportunities of usefulness. Every day brings them, and once gone, they are gone forever.

Deceit is the false road to happiness, and all the joys we travel through to vice, like fairy banquets, vanish when we touch them.

The best inheritance from your father is poverty and a good name. If you have both of these you are unusually fortunate, and your prospects in life are of the very brightest sort.

We must not judge a man by a word or a single action. Life is composed of so many inconsistencies, that we would often take the exception for the rule.

A bishop asked a little child: 'My little friend tell me where God is?' and I will give you an orange.' 'My Lord,' replied the child, 'tell me where he is not? and I will give you two.'

WEDNESDAY.....NOV. 21, 1877

DEMOCRATIC HEEDLESSNESS.

Every now and then is made one of those demonstrations of innocence, or folly, or independence, which seem to justify the taunt of the Republicans that the Democrats do not know how to improve victory, and always fail when they have the opportunity to put their principles into practice. It appears inevitable that some blatant fool, or some impatient aspirant, or some credulous dupe will spring up inopportunely to blast the best considered scheme or fall into some trap laid by astute adversaries; so that while enemies laugh at their disconcerted foes, friends despond at the overthrow of their hopes, and accept disappointment as the doomed concomitant of their party destiny.

At no time do any of these aggravating hindrances to good fortune seem so unnecessary and out of place as at the present. Step by step, the Republican party has been beaten back and the Democratic control assured in the House of Representatives. Inch by inch has encroachment been made upon the majority of that party in the Senate, until the overwhelming disparity has been reduced to a span. Discord has been sown in the ranks of the opposition until it was ready to fall to pieces from intestine commotion; and nothing seemed wanting to perfect Democratic ascendancy but the patient abiding of time and opportunity, did not the indiscreet or the treacherous movements of some of its own body imperil the consummation so nearly attained. What is the force of the obligation that impels Mr. Goode of Virginia and Mr. Ellis of Louisiana to come forward to the aid of Mr. Hayes to the extent of pledging the South to his support, and standing sponsors for the fidelity of the Southern people to the favored points of his administration? The South, it is true, is made happy because Mr. Hayes has recognized his constitutional obligations, and given them peace by enforcing laws already upon the statute book and obligatory upon him as a sworn officer under the laws. Does this compel these gentlemen to go so far as to say they will not oppose such and such measures, because they will not be agreeable to Mr. Hayes, or because such opposition implies want of confidence in him? We confess surprise at such admissions, since abiding want of confidence in a man holding office by such tenure is one of our strongest convictions, and because we believe that the game yet to be played and finished between Mr. Hayes and the Republican party will show that the former will be constrained into submission to old party restraints.

Mr. Goode and Mr. Ellis may be playing a game of their own. They may have special ends to attain. Last winter's experience is full of reminiscences of great party good bartered away for local advantages. But that lesson, with its tremendous consequences of a country cheated out of its President, of a great party thrown back in its grand march of progress, of a people stayed in its return to prosperity, ought to ring in the ears of the co-adjutors of those gentlemen and enforce the reminder that country is greater than party, and that even party is greater than individual preferment.

The Democratic party has still to learn that it was not attained that security of conquest which justifies carelessness or wrangling over the spoil. Its labors so far have been those of Sysiphus. The stone has reached the top of the height only to roll back into the valley again. Will its own friends be those who will cause the renewal of its toils? Yet Mr. Goode and Mr. Ellis and their like by their ill considered tenderness for Mr. Hayes do as much to delay it, and compel a repetition of its struggles as the most strenuous opposition of avowed enemies.

We have no unreasoning opposition to Mr. Hayes. We have a certain feeling of gratitude for the peace that so far has attended his administration through his unexpected observance of constitutional obligations. Yet, we do not regard him as our leader, we do not find him the exponent of the other great principles which distinguished the Democratic from the Republican party; and finding him adhering to the party of which he was the candidate in so much of what made that party offensive to the people, we confess to a doubt in his stability of adherence to what alone has made him acceptable to the Democrats, when the great strife between him and his own party shall have fairly begun.

And therefore we ask the Democratic party in Congress to hold fast to its integrity.

Three Savings banks in Reading, Pa. suspended on Saturday, involving a loss to depositors of a million and a half; also a savings bank at Newark, N. J. suspended; loss to depositors fifty thousand. 'Pop goes the weasel!'

THE WHIPPING POST.

Not long since an old time darky, old time in speech and modes of thought, stepped into our office just as an officer of the law was passing with a negro in charge to be lodged in the county jail to await a trial for larceny. We remarked to the old darky, "there goes another candidate for the penitentiary." "Dat ain't de way, master, dat ain't de way. It dont do a bit of good, nigger dont mind penitentiary, nigger git dare, and he git plenty to eat, and he get his close, and he dont have no work to do. I tell you what it is, master; nigger beap better off in penitentiary dan he is at home. You aint gwine make him stop steelin' by putting him in penitentiary. De only way to make him quit is to cut he back, or broke he neck.'

And we think the old darky is about right. No doubt there is a delusion about the comfort and idleness of a penitentiary life, and no doubt many a darky who has "broken into it" in the hope of finding the dolce far niendi has rued his error. Yet perhaps in the spirit of the fox who lost his tail in the trap, and wished all his fellows to go and do likewise, no contradiction to the error has gone abroad from any discharged convict, and the charm of a penitentiary home still tempts to new crime.

The Penitentiary is the gift of that political school which, after the war, shed the beneficent rays of a new light upon the benighted souls of the Southern people; a school surcharged with the doctrine of human perfectibility, by human agency; a school which treated the bible as an old woman's tale, and set down Solomon as a tedious old fogy; a school, that in one of its branches, enfranchised the boy from the tyranny of the rod, effaced all that weary stage between the youth and manhood of the unhappy days of the olden time, exchanging with magic speed of transition the pinafore for the long tailed coat, and the sugar rag of the nursery for the fragrant cigar of precocious manhood; a school, that in its more advanced stages, makes early graduates in pleasant vices, and fills the land with a precocious race of embezzling clerks and defaulting cashiers, to whom the world owes a living, but which living, that world in its old dull way of thinking, was much too slow to give; and a school, that in another of its branches, taught that the sacred gift of freedom had at once so elevated and purified the enfranchised slave, that his soul was at once purged of its corruption, his brain cleared of its ignorance, his body shielded from the degradation of corporal chastisement.

In our old fashioned way, and following the true proverbial philosophy, we had learned to believe with Solomon, that the lash was a very good thing in its way; that 'with the rod and reproof cometh wisdom,' and that as an argumentum ad hominem stripes made a more touching appeal through the medium of a lacerated back than the most persuasive eloquence of the moral suasionists. And all of us can recal the terror of the criminal growing in anticipation of a close contact with the grim skeleton of the whipping post, and can bring back in memory's eye the writhing and the squirming and the twisting and the outcries, as the well directed stroke, impelled by the vigorous arm, fell upon the naked back of the hapless culprit. There was no sham in all this. There were no dreams of tempering penalties with pleasures. It was real, solid and earnest; and as the victim was led away with bleeding shoulders, he felt that the law had in it some substantial vengeance, and spectators trembled at the thought of in turn incurring it.

It is certain, that in the days of the whipping post, the offences it was specially designed to punish were less frequent than now. They increase with fearful rapidity under the feeling that the penitentiary is no punishment to be dreaded. And we believe it the duty of the press to agitate the subject until the people are unanimous in instructing the next legislature to propose that Constitutional Amendment restoring the whipping post, and which amendment was so unfortunately omitted by the last Constitutional Convention.

MR. DAVIS' SPEECH.

We regret that so little space is left us to notice the excellent speech of our Representative, the Hon. J. J. Davis on the resumption repeal bill. His views are so sensible and so forcibly expressed that it will carry conviction to everybody but the bond holders and the stock jobbers of Wall street. In our next we will call attention to the salient points of the speech, contenting ourselves now with an expression of gratification that Mr. Davis takes strong ground for the repeal of the tax on State bank issues. This is the entering wedge to the overthrow of a system of monopoly which throttles all competition, and gives the national bank perfect control of the fortunes of the country—a control, the baleful effects of which are palpable on all sides.

But we cannot go farther at present without doing the speaker injustice, and will reserve farther notice of the speech to another time.

CONGRESS.

One of the most important acts of the House last week was the passage of the Bland bill remonetizing silver, making it a legal tender equally with gold. The majority in the House was so large as to be entirely significant of the demands of the country, all except the bond holders, from whom there has gone up a great howl. They will beset the Senate and they will besiege Mr. Hayes to set back the tide which promises to relieve the people. This bill is regarded as a compromise between expansion and contraction, and ought to be regarded as a step towards financial relief. It does hurt the bond holders, not because it violates faith, but because it disappoints their expectations. They bought their bonds when they were payable in legal tender—in greenbacks, and when gold was at a premium of 90 to 125. Now, they insist that the bonds are redeemable only in gold, and in the mean time, by a trick, they demonetized silver and would have degrade greenbacks. Let the House be as still as it was last winter on the army bill, and it will carry its point.

The army bill passed the House limiting the army to 20,000 men, but providing in addition four cavalry regiments for Texas defence. The bill, in this form the Senate defeated, but passed it with an amendment allowing the army to be recruited to a standard of 25,000 men, and striking out the provision for four cavalry regiments to be stationed on the Rio Grande.

As we write, we do not know the ultimate fate of the bill. But as no arguments on the side of an increase of the army have impressed us with any feeling but that of increased opposition to it, we hope the House will have the firmness to hold to its purpose.

Later Congressional news tell us that on Saturday the Senate amendments to the army bill were mostly concurred in. Fourteen Democrats, including five from Texas, voted with the Republicans. The bill provides that cavalry regiments may be recruited to one hundred men to each company, and that a sufficient force of cavalry shall be employed for the defence of the Indian and Mexican frontier of Texas. The army cannot be recruited beyond 25,000 men.

Distinct and quite severe shocks of earthquakes were felt last week over quite an extensive area in the West. They were felt in the western counties of this State, in Tennessee. In the western part of Iowa they were somewhat alarming. In Omaha, bells were rung, and in the printing offices cases were overturned. Brick buildings rocked to and fro, walls were cracked, and there was much terror for a few minutes; but there was no actual damage done.

CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Nominations of Thomas as collector and Cochrane as naval officer at Baltimore have been referred to the usual committee where it is said they will be held to make weight for or against the confirmation of the New York nominations for like positions. The nomination of Lawrence for the New Orleans custom house took the same course and will probably remain in the committee until the New York nominations are confirmed or rejected.

The caucus committee consisting of Edmunds, Cameron, Christiancy, Bruce, Kirkwood, Hamlin and Howe are said to have exacted a promise from Hayes that he would not nominate democrats hereafter if suitable republicans could be found.

SENATE.—Senator Dawes, of Massachusetts, presented a remonstrance of forty-five National Banks of the city of Boston, against the passage of the House bill for the renonetization of silver. Petitioners set forth that they are required by law to hold and do possess many millions of dollars worth of bonds of the United States, and they are apprehensive that the passage of the bill will greatly depreciate the value of such bonds and have a bad influence on business throughout the country; it was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Eaton, of Connecticut, introduced a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for the creation of a tribunal for States for the decision of all contested issues arising in the choice of electors for President and Vice President. Referred to a select committee having that matter in charge.

The Committee on Foreign Affairs agreed to report an appropriation of $100,000 for the French Exposition.

About 2:30 o'clock yesterday a violent earthquake was felt at Knoxville, Tenn, disappearing in a northward direction. It lasted about one minute.

The Mexican war steamer, "Mexico," has arrived at San Diego and landed 150 regulars, who will march to San Rafael to restore Diaz's authority.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Field & Leiter's dry goods house was burned last night. The building except the two lower floors was completely gutted and the stock of dry goods destroyed. An accident happened to the fireman by which one was killed outright and four others taken from the ruins so badly hurt that they will probably die. The building cost $750,000, stock about a million. Eight hundred and fifty employees are thrown out of employment.

LATER.—The fire broke out again flooding a basement where package goods were stored. Only two fatalities, five others badly injured. Insurance nearly a million.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The Herald's Rome dispatch says that Cardinal Sinconi, Secretary of State, is summoning all the Cardinals to support him in his trial for a foreign Pope and the old conciliatory policy.

The Pope's favorite dog or has been dismissed. It is supposed he has been giving information to the Italian government.

The Cardinals hope to keep the death of the Pope secret for 24 hours. This will fail because such decided arrangements have been made that the government must know of his demise immediately after it occurs.

The black small pox is prevailing with virulence in the Vatican.

The Charlotte Observer says: Passengers by the Statesville train last evening report that yesterday morning as the convicts at work at the head of the Western North Carolina Railroad were being taken out to work, a squad made a break and escaped from guard limits. The guards fired upon them and killed two instantly, and in the chase which ensued for the remaining fugitives, dogs tore the clothes from one and lacerated his limbs and body to a very painful and serious degree. Our information is that the remainder of the squad were captured and returned to the stockade.

The Charlotte Observer says: We gave in yesterday's paper, an account of the recent killing at or near Tester's mill on the Mecklenburg and Cabarrus line, of a young man named Hagler by a negro named Blair. Since that writing we have information that Blair was captured in the neighborhood, on the Mecklinburg side of the line, a day or two after the occurence, and after a preliminary hearing before Justice R B Parks, was committed to jail at Concord.

The blow which caused the death of young Hagler is described as a very powerful one. It is said the rock with which he was struck crushed the skull to the length of seven inches, yet notwithstanding this, the young man lived until the succeeding day.

Tax gathering closed last week, not much to the satisfaction of the Sheriff. He will be glad to see his delinquent friends at his office in Hillsboro before the first of December.

Thanks to brother Green for his brotherly and generous notice of us in his last week's issue. Such an expression of kindliness and appreciation is valued.

H. N. Brown & Co. are "home again." See ad. in this issue.

See ad. of "saddler Joe" who will equip you for the road in the best style; and who wants to dispose of some of his tame bees, now is the best condition for the purchaser.

Last week, with the exception of one night when there was light rain, the weather was all the farmer could wish, and every laggard in wheat seeding did his best to make up for lost time. A large breadth of oats has been sown and is now beautifully green.

We are indebted to Mr. W A. Davis editor of the TORCHLIGHT, to be present at a Thanksgiving supper to be given by him. We congratulate him on the financial success which enables him to indulge in such generosity. It is vouchsafed to few of his editorial brethren.

Mr. L. W. Hall has resigned his commission as Magistrate in Little River Township, and Mr. C. R. Wilson has been appointed to fill the vacancy, and qualified thereto on Saturday last.

Mr. Jonathan Nichols of Little River Township from one grain of twin corn this season made six good ears—no nubbins.

Don't forget Dr. Warner's Health Corsets, for sale by J. P. Gulley, Raleigh, at from $1.25, to $2.00, the things for health and comfort.

The Right Reverend Bishop Atkinson preached in St. Matthew's on Sunday morning; and again, at half past 7 p. m. when he administered the rite of confirmation to two young ladies.

We expect to be absent necessarily a great part of this week.

The central shaft of Swannanoa tunnel has been reached, showing that the work of piercing the mountains is half done. An engine has been hauled up the mountain and is now at work on the Western side; and the work goes bravely on.

Even if we are not small, we know what to do when troubled with a cough or cold No doctor bills for us. We take a 25 cent note, go to the nearest drug store and buy a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. One dose relieves us and one bottle cures us entirely.

Our correspondent from "Rawley" shall have a hearing next week.

We again call attention to the Thanksgiving proclamation of Gov. Vance. The 29th inst is the day appointed.

Good News.

When over the Chatham line last week we had the pleasure of learning that a disease akin to that which has been sweeping off the hogs, has laid hold of the dogs, and the curs who have grinned defiance at taxation and public opinion are melting away before a foe who respects neither. We welcome this new ally to our cause, and hope he may enlarge his field of action.

The Orange Guards turned out on Thursday afternoon last with tolerably full ranks, and gave great pleasure by the beauty of their uniform and the accuracy of their evolutions. They drilled for an hour or so in the fine grounds of P. C. Cameron Esq. in the presence of a large number of ladies who were enthusiastic in their admiration.

The Company needs a flag, musical instruments and some other aid to perfect its equipment, and we expect one of those successful demonstrations of our ladies to help them out. It parades again during this week.

Old Apples.

We are informed that a lady in this county has in her keeping apples of the Mattamuskeet variety, now in the third year of their existence, perfectly sound, but not juicy or sweet. We have heard many instances of this apple keeping over "till apples come again," but these are the most venerable apples we ever heard of. Our information is perfectly trustworthy.

Dr. D. A. Robertson will be here on his usual monthly visit on Monday the 26th inst. Owing to change of schedule he will not arrive until a quarter before two o'clock that afternoon.

SUCCESSFUL FARMING.

On our rounds through the southern portion of the county last week, we stopped at the farm of Matthew Atwater, Esq formerly one of the Representatives from Orange. We had often heard of Mr. Atwater's success as a farmer, and fortunately we saw the farm at that period when the crops had been garnered, and an accurate statement of results obtained.

The farm lies partly in Orange and partly in Chatham, along the waters of Persimmon Nursery Branch, the land gently undulating, part of it low ground, and all of a good loam, light and easily worked. Mr. Atwater settled the place about 1850, most of the tract being then in forest, the balance old field. He camped with his wagon for more than a month on the spot where his dwelling now stands until he could erect a tenement for the use of his family. Now, he lives in an excellent two story, nicely painted framed building, surrounded with barns and stables and all necessary outbuildings, a large portion of the original growth retained for shade, while extensive and thrifty orchards replace much of the forest. The old fields have been enclosed and brought back into service, new grounds have been cleared, the creek in some places turned by ditching and the whole farm presenting just such an aspect as intelligent industry might be expected to impart.

Mr. Atwater employs no large force, and it is not so much to the magnitude as to the success of his labors that our attention was directed. Besides his own labor, he employs two croppers, and he gave us the following results, not guess work, but as the test of actual measurements. From twenty three acres he gathered one hundred and ninety six barrels of corn. From a fraction over one acre, on a kind of island formed by a ditch cutting of a bend in the creek, he made one hundred and two and a half bushels. From the part of the farm originally in old field, the yield averaged eleven barrels per acre. He tells of the extraordinary performances of an old mule, nineteen years old, by whose work was made one hundred and thirty two barrels of corn, two hundred and forty three bushels of wheat and one hundred & twelve bushels of threshed oats; and by whose extra labor of five days, eight hundred pounds of seed cotton were made.

What with his corn, wheat, oats, cotton, potatoes (he showed us one of six pounds weight), fruit, pork &c. Mr. Atwater comes as near making two years support out of one years labor as some other farmers we have lately read of.

THRESHING APPLES.

Mr. Atwater showed us his process for making cider which is novel, and efficient. He uses his wheat threshing machine as a crusher for the apples. He sinks a hogshead in the ground, cutting away a portion of one side to admit the chute of the gin. The latter is then brought up to the hogshead, the sides being boarded up to prevent the lateral escape of the fruit, the horse power attached and set in motion, the apples poured in the hopper, and in an instant they are delivered into the hogshead in a fluid paste, and thence transferred to the press. Mr. A. has made during the season for himself and neighbors several thousand gallons. We tasted some made of the Hall apple, the best we have ever drank. He has now about one hundred and fifty gallons on hand. By the above process, there is scarcely a limit to the quantity made in a day except in the capacity of the press.

We realized in seeing Mr. Atwater's operations, how completely comfort and independence were at the command of the really industrious, thrifty and intelligent planter.

A Fine Mill.

We visited the grain mill of Mr. Oliver Lamb, situated near the mouth of Collins' Creek in Chatham county on the Jones' Bridge road. The water power is excellent and all concentrated upon a pair of turbine wheels operating the machinery of the mill about one hundred yards below the dam, giving a fall of about twenty feet. The machinery is all new, and combines wonderful simplicity, perfect directness of action, and great power in a degree we have never seen equalled. There are two pair of burrs, those for wheat turning out each day about 8 bbls of that splendid flour for which this mill is celebrated. The machinery is so well adapted to its different uses, that there is a great economy in hand labor, the grain being received and distributed by ingenious distribution of gearing and the flour and meal—the latter automatically sifted for market—in the same way.

In connection with the mill is a cotton gin, planing machine, and other mechanical works all operated by the same power. The whole is an enterprise well deserving the encouragement it receives.

Dem Porpusses.'

A friend tells us of a comment he overheard, made by a prominent Republican of the county of Craven, upon the character of the keeper of the Poor House, of that county. The parties were all together in a store, and the keeper was making purchases for his charges. His purchases made, he went off; and as he left the store, the Republican luminary remarked, "You see dat man jess gwine out? Well! he aint proud a bit. He keep de poor house, an' he dont think hese'f better 'n any other folks. He go to de table wid de porpusses, he eat wid de porpusses, and he do same as if he was one of de porpusses hese'f."

And the humble subject of this eulogy went off to provide for the creature comforts of his "porpusses."

Tuscarora Corn.

MR. EDITOR:

I planted a small patch of the above corn; the seed came from Mr. S. A. Williams Ringwood Halifax county N. C. quite late last spring. The ground was good and well plowed previous to the planting. This patch was worked one time with a hoe and not plowed at all after coming up.

To-day, I measured one of the stalks, of average size; it was ten feet to the ear and four feet above; it had twenty blades of fodder, most of them over five feet in length, and very broad. I think this variety of corn admirably adapted to making forage and shall sow it next season for that purpose.

RENOVATION. NOT PROSTRATION.

Did any enfeebled human being ever become strong under the operation of powerful cathartics or sulivants? It is sometimes necessary to regulate the bowels, but that cannot be done by active purgation, which exhausts the vital forces and serves no good purpose whatever. The only true way to promote health and vigor, which are essential to regularity of the organic functions, is to invigorate, discipline and purify the system at the same time. The extraordinary efficacy of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in cases of debility or irregularity of the organs of digestion, assimilation, secretion and discharge, is universally admitted. Appetite, good digestion, a regular habit of body, active circulation of the blood, and purity of all the animal fluids are induced by this superb tonic and corrective. It has no equals, moreover, as a preventive of chills and fever, and other types of malarial disease. To emigrants and travelers it is particularly serviceable as a medicinal safeguard.

The TOBACCO PLANT has a full and most excellent report of the late Baptist Convention held at Durham. Brother Green has shown commendable zeal and great skill in presenting so complete and valuable an exhibit of the interesting proceedings. We regret that this week we cannot avail ourselves of his labors, as absence a portion of the week has compelled us to use other material to fill our columns. We may in our next present an abstract.

Prof. Denck's Concert.

The musicale at Odd Fellows Hall last night was decidedly the most recherche affair of the season. A large and cultivated audience was attracted by the reputation of the Professor and the well known merit of our home talent, which had been promised to assist in the entertainment of the evening. Of the Professor himself we can truly say that his performance on the piano were the most wonderful, artistic and delightful ever given before a Danville audience. His manipulation of the keys of the instrument is little less than miraculous, while the effect produced evidences a perfect mastery of the subject. But as highly pleased as the audience was by the performances of Prof. Denck, (a fact attested by frequent and hearty applause) his was by no means the most interesting part of the concert. We cannot speak in terms too complimentary of the singing of Miss Hankins, Miss Averett and Mr. Abernethey. Miss Hankins first sang "Flower Girl," and was so warmly encored that a second appearance could not be denied the delighted audience; and when she did appear and render "Kathleen Mavourneen" the audience, at first delighted, were completely enraptured. A duet, "When I Know that Thou Art Near," by Miss Averett and Mr. Abernethy was also encored. Miss Crew sang "Only Speak Kindly" and "I'm Sixty-Two," delighting the audience and receiving loud applause.

The evening's entertainment was concluded by a master-piece of music rendered by Prof. Denck on one of Steiff's splendid pianos. This piece was "The Walking of the Lion," and the wonderful powers of the player and the fine tone of the instrument electrified and thrilled the audience.

The thanks of the public are due to Prof. Johnson for inaugurating and conducting the concert, and to Prof. Denck and those who assisted him, for furnishing one of the most enjoyable entertainments of the season.—Danville News.

L. CASS CARPENTER.

The Charlotte Observer says: It has only been a few months since this name was found at the mast head of the Columbia Daily Union, a paper then published in that city in the interest of the vilest set of thieves and plunderers that ever infested this land. Daily tirades of abuse were heaped upon the oppressed people of our sister commonwealth by this man, who now inhabits a felon's cell as a punishment for his crimes. A telegram from Columbia, dated the 13th inst, informs us that the arguement in the trial of Carpenter, indicted for forging, consumed the session of the court until the afternoon, when the case was sent to the jury, who returned a verdict of guilty.

Smalls and Cardoso had previously been convicted of the crimes charged against them, and Carpenter follows in their wake. Justice is meted out at last, and the culprits, who fastened their poisonous fangs upon proud old South Carolina, are made to bow their heads in shame and acknowledge the truth of the quotation, "Justice is mine, saith the Lord." Clothed in the garb of penitentiary convicts; breaking rock under the careful watching of a guard, or seeking repose in a felon's cell, at the dead horns of midnight, these culprits will have ample food for reflection and time for repentance.

The Mayor of this town has posted up a notice forbidding the firing of fireballs on the streets under pain of fine. This order is construed to extend to all other kinds of fire works. What of Christmas fire crackers and other noisy nuisances? We would be glad to see the ordinances of Savannah and other cities put in force everywhere, which prohibit their use in cities absolutely. This is done for protection against fires. Last 4th of July there were 135 alarms and several destructive fires in New York, nine tenths of which were traced to holiday fireworks, crackers, roman candles, toy rockets &c.

MARRIED.

In this county on the 14th inst, by the Rev. Mr. Morrow, Mr Stephen T. Forrest and Miss Mary P. McAdams, daughter of James McAdams Esq. All of this county.

O, may with earth revolving year,
Their mutual joys increase:
Earth's highways full of pleasantness,
Each path a path of peace;
And olive branches, bright and sweet,
Spring like flowers around their feet.

In Hillsboro on the 13th inst, by Rev. J. H. Wheeler, Jones W. Watson jr, of Chapel Hill to Mrs. Geo Anna, granddaughter of Judge Geo. Laws of this place.

It is the sincere wish of many hearts that this happy couple may live a long and prosperous life together, serving God as dutiful children. May they, as husband and wife, so live in peace, and in obedience to the marriage vow, as to be an example to all who may in the future or have already pledged themselves to become husband and wife.

May their married life,
Be to each a pleasure,
May they live in happiness
And never wish to sever.

May the brightest blessings,
To mortal ever given,
Crown their earthly pilgrimage,
And guide their steps to Heaven.

Bright be their future, may no care,
O'er them its darkened shadows throw
But fragrant flow'rets ever fair
Bloom on their cheek, and deck their brow
Flowers of the heart which ne'er decay,
To cheer them in their onward way.

The following young gentlemen accompanied the bridegroom from Chapel Hill. Dr. E. R. Williamson, James Askew, J. E. Williamson and E. S. Simmons.

In this place on Thursday evening the 15th inst at the residence of the bride's father by Dr. W. B. Harrell, Mr. Jake Trollinger, of Alamance county, to Miss Bell, daughter of Thomas Gordon of this place.

HANDLE THE COLTS.

The horse submits to man's authority for the reason that he is aware that the man is the stronger. He is kind and tractable from being treated kindly and handled lovingly. When horses become frightened no matter how strong, generally forget their strength. When the colt is running by its mother's side it can best be taught valuable lessons. Man's strength can then easily overcome it. The more you talk to and handle a colt the more it will know, and the kinder it will be. No one should ever permit a colt to have the mastery in strength. Consequently small boys should not handle them until the colt is entirely subdued in this respect. Nor should a colt be ever hitched or led by a halter which he can break. If he once learns he can break his halter it will take years to cure him of the fault, if it is ever cured. But by kind handling and playing with them—which any one can enjoy who has a heart within him—they will ever after be easily caught, kind in service and more trusting in danger or difficulty. Now is the season of the year to attend to this matter. When the colt comes about you never abuse him, but with kindness educate a familiarity with him. Thus he will be always gentle, and easily adapted to any work. There will be no trouble breaking such a colt. He will naturally take to it. By being treated riciously the colt can also be learned mean tricks and vicious habits.—Iowa Register

GRASS, CLOVER, TURF.

The Great and Good once told the young man, feed my sheep, and repeated it the third time.

The English statesman, the third time, said to the young student, who wishes to develop eloquence, "action, action, action."

Three times, Daniel Webster said, "read the Dictionary," to the young aspirant for legal fame.

So, the Maryland Farmer urges, and has urged, that the farmer who would make his land fertile, and keep it so, that he should make turf grow clover and grass, and when he has got a turf he can make grain, or any other crop; a good soil of clover or grass, or both, plowed under, makes a soil that will grow all others.

Undoubtedly, it is better to sow timothy or other grasses, with fine, narrow leaves, in the fall—September or October—as they need time to get sufficient growth to stand the winter and hot sun; and an application of five to eight bushels of plaster to the acre, and 100 to 300 pounds of bone to the acre, to be harrowed in at the time of seeding, will give benefits much more than the cost; and later in the fall five to ten bushels of common salt will also pay.

Buckwheat should be used to sow clover early in the spring, followed up with plaster and bone dust as above, as fertilizers.

And in both cases, fall or spring sowing, there is great benefit in sowing plaster immediately after the grain is harvested, and after the first mowing.—Maryland Farmer.

LEARN THE VALUE OF MONEY

A silver dollar represents the day's work of the laborer. It is given to a boy; he has no idea of what it has cost or what it is worth. He would be as likely to give a dollar as a dime for a top or any other toy. But if the boy has learned to earn the dimes and dollars by the sweat of his face he knows the difference. Hard work is to him a measure of values that can never be rubbed out of his mind. Let him learn by experience that a hundred weary days of labor, and it seems a great sum of money; a thousand dollars is a fortune and $10,000 is inconceivable, for it is far more than he ever expects to possess. When he has earned a dollar he thinks twice before he spends it. He wants to invest it so as to get the full value of a day's work for it. It is a great wrong for society and to a boy to bring him up to man's estate without this knowledge. A fortune at twenty-one without it is almost inevitably thrown away. With it and a little capital to start on, he will make his own fortune better than any one can make it for him.

HARD TALLOW CANDLES.

Many persons are averse, and justly so, to using kerosene oil for lights. A good hard tallow candle that would not be expensive, would be a welcome send to many good housewives. It is said that such a candle can be made by the following process: To a pound of tallow add one ounce of camphor, six ounces of beeswax, and three ounces of alum. Melt all together, and run the candles into moulds. These candles will make a good light and burn a long time.—Exchange.

The season is much the farmer's more. Crops follow judgment more than the weather.

AN AUTOMATIC HORSE.

Mr. J. H. Nolan, who already secured him a high station in the mechanical world has just invented a new means of locomotion which is in the form of an automatic [illegible] The weight which is carried [illegible] and is applicable to any model [illegible] of simplicity, and any amount secured, in fact can be [illegible] faster than the fastest [illegible] horse of the city. A small horse [illegible] of carrying a man 10 or 12 miles an hour, can be used by children for recreation, can be built at from three to five dollars. The horse can carry considerable weight in addition to the rider. The person sits in position as he would upon the live animal, with the feet in the stirrups and reins in hands, in which position he can govern the speed and guide the "horse" as well. There was an exhibition place with one of the horses recently in the city, and although old and cumbersome and unfavorable for other travel on account of locomotion, a boy weighing sixty pounds propelled the horse at from six to seven miles an hour with the utmost ease. The experiment thoroughly established the practical value of the invention.—Boston Traveller.

The Journal of Chemistry says that to alum water is the best insect destroyer known. Put the alum into hot water and let it boil till all the alum is dissolved; then apply it hot with a brush to all crevices, bedsteads and other places where any insects are found. Ants, bedbugs, cockroaches and creeping things are killed by it, while it has no danger of poisoning the family or injuring property.

Prof. Stewart, of Cornell University has found, by actual experiment, that one-quarter of an acre well set in clover is sufficient to feed one cow one hundred and eighty days if cut and fed her, while if allowed to run on it would not probably last two weeks. Another advantage in the care of milch cows is that they give more milk from the same amount of food, it being found the walking to and from the pasture diminishes the quantity of milk.

Financially, the farmer is the safest man in the country. Of eleven hundred and twelve bankrupts in Massachusetts, only fourteen were farmers; yet the farming community numbers full half the population. The people must live, and while the use of luxuries may be diminished by hard times, there always will be a call for the produce of the farm. Farming has, of course, felt the general depression in business.

"The short horse is soonest curried," is thus paraphrased by a Dutchman: "Dot schmall leetle honies don't take such a goot vile to brush himself all over mit der gurry gomes."

TUTT'S PILLS. A Noted Divine says They are worth their weight in gold. READ WHAT HE SAYS: Dr. Tutt—Dear Sir: During four years I have been a martyr to Dyspepsia, Constipation, and Piles. Last spring your pills were recommended to me. Tried them (but with little faith). Can now say I am well. Have good appetite, digestion perfect, regular stools, liver active, and have gained [illegible] pounds flesh. They are worth their weight in gold. Rev. R. R. SIMPSON, Louisville, Ky.

Dr. Tutt has been engaged in the practice of medicine thirty years, and for a long time was demonstrator of anatomy in the Medical College of Georgia, leaving among the profession the reputation of a scientific physician and a close student. In his practice he has succeeded in combining in these pills the best of the curative principles of all the remedies known to the profession, and they have won their great reputation as a result of a thorough test of their virtues in the hands of a skilful physician. Their great superiority consists in the fact that they act directly upon the digestive organs, regulating the liver, and thereby purifying the blood. Their great object is to increase the appetite, by causing the food to properly assimilate. Thus the system is nourished, and by their tonic action on the digestive organs, regular and healthy evacuations are produced. The rapidity with which persons take on flesh under the influence of these pills of itself indicates their adaptability to search the body, and hence their efficacy in curing nervous debility, sick headache, dyspepsia, dizziness, disordered liver, torpidity of the bowels, obstruction of the kidneys, chronic constipation, and all diseases of the digestive organs. They produce a healthy appetite, and cause the body to take on a healthy condition, thereby imparting health and strength to the system. Sold everywhere. Office, 35 Murray St., New York.

Ayer's Hair Vigor, For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color, with the glossy coat freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit, but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

The North Carolina Farmer

J. H. Enniss

Dear Sir—I have been a practical Farmer for 30 years, and during that time have been the best Agricultural Journals of the day, and I undertake to say that there is more valuable practical information to our farmers, in the first and second numbers of the North Carolina Farmer than in any dozen copies of the Agricultural papers I have taken and I do most cordially recommend it to every Farmer in our State as the paper for him above all others.
